

ABSTRACT

A method and system is presented that provides for a data-logging protocol with stateless connections and atomic commands that is robust, easily debugged, and easily parsed. The data-logging protocol provides for a set of commands and responds for logging data from a data manager to a data server in a cellular data network.